OUR COLLECTIONS

The Alfred Gillett Trust archive preserves and makes available to the public heritage collections relating to C & J Clark Ltd., the Quaker family which founded the global shoemaking company nearly 200-years ago, and the local area the industry developed within.

The collections are varied and include family and business archives, shoe catalogues, point of sale materials, fossils, artwork and furniture, costume, film and sound archives, and a large collection of historic footwear and shoemaking machinery.

RESEARCH

The reading room at the Grange is currently closed for refurbishment. Researchers who wish to consult collections held by the Trust can request a research and copy service - please see service charges overleaf. Researchers who wish to consult collections are advised to contact the Collections team. Please note that as we are developing the new Shoemakers Museum planned to open in 2025, there may be delay in responding to research enquiries.

TOURS & TALKS

The Trust offers a range of other services which aim to share knowledge about the collections it cares for. Archivists and Curators are available to give talks on a wide variety of topics and provide tours of the archive in Street. Please see service charges overleaf and direct any enquiries to enquiries@agtrust.org.uk.

PHOTOGRAPHY & REPRODUCTIONS

The Trust provides a reproduction and digitisation service offering physical and digital copies of objects and archives held in the collection. Items can be digitally photographed or scanned using archival-standard equipment by professional photographers in the inhouse studio. High-quality digital images can be provided in a range of file formats and resolutions to suit the nature of the request.
